

THOMAS M. GREENE

UNPRECEDENTED SUCCESS REPRESENTING WHISTLEBLOWERS

Tom Greene knows better than most just how important it is for a whistleblower to work with an attorney prepared to see a False Claims Act case through to its conclusion, regardless of whether the United States elects to intervene. Greene is responsible for the largest settlement ever in a False Claims Act case in which the government declined to intervene, a $430 million settlement with Pfizer over off-label marketing of its Neurontin epilepsy drug.

The Neurontin case became a model for others, with more than $7 billion in government recoveries under Greene's novel theory. In 2010, Greene again set a new precedent, winning a $142 million jury verdict by trying a RICO case based on fraudulent pharmaceutical marketing practices.

The Greene team has developed a reputation for putting in the hard work required to win whistleblower cases, succeeding where others have failed through tireless dedication. With nearly 20 years of experience in False Claims Act cases, a knack for legal innovation and a track record of successes, the attorneys of Greene LLP are well-positioned to handle any False Claims Act case successfully—even if the case is without precedent.
